The NSS Unit of Darrang College organised a plantation drive on the World Environment Day inside the campus with the aim of promoting environmental awareness and encouraging students to take part in sustainable practices. The initiative was planned as part of the college's ongoing efforts to create a cleaner and green environment while involving young volunteers in meaningful community work.

The programme began with a brief address by the Programme , who spoke about the importance of environmental conservation and the role of students in protecting natural resources. They highlighted how small actions like planting trees can contribute to long-term ecological benefits, including cleaner air, improved soil quality and a healthier campus atmosphere.

NSS volunteers gathered with enthusiasm and worked together to plant saplings in designated areas around the college. Each group was guided on how to plant and care for the saplings properly. The volunteers handled the activity with responsibility, ensuring that every plant was placed securely and watered after plantation. Their teamwork and dedication reflected their commitment to environmental welfare.

Faculty members also joined the students, making the drive more engaging and collaborative. The presence of teachers encouraged the volunteers, and the involvement of both students and staff helped strengthen the spirit of unity and collective responsibility.

Throughout the drive, volunteers discussed the need for continued care of the planted saplings and the importance of maintaining green spaces within the campus. They pledged to monitor the growth of the plants regularly and support future plantation activities.

The plantation drive concluded with a short reflection session where students shared their thoughts on environmental protection. Many expressed that participating in such activities helped them understand the value of conservation more deeply and motivated them to adopt eco-friendly habits in their daily lives.

Overall, the programme was productive and inspiring. Volunteers of the NSS Unit, Darrang College, actively participated in the plantation drive, contributing to a greener tomorrow. The event not only enhanced the greenery of the campus but also strengthened the students' sense of responsibility toward the environment.
